In late summer, 1955, young Johnny Sutherland came home with a question. The city librarian wanted to know if his mother, Margaret, would like to work at the library. Margaret said yes, she would like that very much. So on September 1, 1955, Margaret Sutherland began her 42 year tenure at the Weston Public Library.

Weston Public Library

New at the Library

- Open by Andre Agassi (nonfiction)
- U is for Undertow by Sue Grafton
- London Boulevard, by Ken Bruen
- Double Jack Murders by Patrick McManus
- Perfect by Natasha Friend (young adult)

Over the years, many library users were children and grandchildren of former patrons. Margaret's gentle guidance gave rise to several generations of avid readers in Weston. Self-taught, Margaret had a passion for library service, for doing things the right way, and for treating people of all ages with respect. During her four plus decades at the library, she oversaw many changes, both to the facility and to the way library service was provided to the community. To her credit, she was able to adapt to new technology throughout her career. She admitted to many interesting occurrences during her years as librarian, including the time a book was returned with a slice of unwrapped cheese inside, apparently used as a bookmark.

Margaret was a remarkable person, dedicated to this library. May her standard of kindness and excellent library service live on in Weston.

New Year... New Library Schedule

Monday, Wednesday, Friday 8:00 - 5:00 (closed 12:00-1:00 for lunch)

Tuesday, Thursday 1:30 - 7:00

Beginning January 4, 2010 the library schedule will be new and improved (see above.) This change in the weekly schedule does not affect the 35 total open hours each week. The revisions allow us more consistency in hours, to be open every week day after school, and to accommodate both early morning and evening users. Your Weston library card has the schedule printed on the back, and if you would like to stop by the library, a sticker will be applied to update the information. Library board, staff, and city officials are constantly striving to make your library as user friendly as possible. Please let us know how we are doing!
